MEN'S LUNCHEON AND SMOKER.

BIG MASS MEETING AT OPERA HOUSE TONIGHT FOR MEN ONLY.

There will be a men's mass meeting at the opera house tonight at 8:00 o'clock, and every citizen and others interested are invited to be present. There will be plenty of good things to cat and good eigars to smoke, and the Grayling Citizen's Band orchestra is going to funish music, and everything will be done to make the evening a pleasant one.

This meeting has been arranged by a committee of local business men, and it is intended at this time to bring up for the consideration of our citizens the necessity of erecting a new, modto-date hotel in our city. . The matter will be thoroughly discussed at this time, and everybody will be given an opportunity to put their shoulder to the wheel of progress and push for this much needed enterprise.

-Justin A. Runyan, the secretary of the Bay City Board of Commerce, will be here to give a talk along lines pertaining to the matter under consideration. He is a gentleman of broad experience and has come directly in personal contact with such men as Theodore Roosevelt, W. H. Taft, Governor Hadiey, Governor LaFollet, William Jennings Bryan, and other noted statesmen. He is a man of strong personality and no doubt will give a talk that will be interesting and full of good common sense, such as will do us all good. Also others will give short

We are all cordially invited to be present, and show our good will toward our community's welfare. The charge for luncheon tickets is only 25 cents, which amount will not much more than half pay for the spread that will be set before the guests, besides everybody will be royally entertained.

Remember that tonight (Thursday) is the night, and if you haven't had time to dress up for the occasion, come as you

The Naven lighthouse, in the lake of is about three hundred yards across and which produces very little but moss and a few stunted pine trees. The keeper of the lighthouse, named onsson, died many years ago, ing a wife and 14 small children There were 11 boys and 3 girls, but the widow did not shrink from the task of caring for the young ones. was only one room besides the lighthouse. She tended to the lighthouse, and as soon as a child was able to assist in catching fish, he or she had to take hold with might and main. They succeeded fairly well in providing food for the 15 mouths. But the question of giving the children an education was a more difficult mat ter. In winter the boat often had to be pulled over the ice to reach oper water, and after the boat reached the mainland the children had to walk a long distance to the school house the children are all grown and their mother is still living on the island. Her oldest son is tending to the lighthouse, two of the younger also stay at home but all the rest have left the tight little island. They still love the island above every other spot on earth, and are fond of reunions on it. Now it seems incredible to them that they could all live for years in that one room, but there can be no mistake about it.

It did not take long before Premier Hammarskjold, the head of the new cabinet, was asked for his views of the question of legislation llouor traffic. He answered that the new cabinet was formed for taking care of the defenses. For the time being this is the main issue and it must be tended to above everything else It is expedient to avoid all minor party issues. But the premier holds that the temperance problem is party issue, and he cannot see any why temperance legislation should be neglected because a new cabinet has been appointed. He even said that bills on the liquor question may be introduced in the second chamber of the rikeday after the elections. This would seem to indicate that the Hammarskjold cabinet will not try to frustrate or even discredit the anti-liquor policy introduced by the Staaff cabinet, though it will not be allowed undue prominence.

Mrs. Kristina Nordenstrom of Bergsio. Helsingland, is one hundred and one years old; her daughter, Mrs. Soderlund, Cambridge, Minn., is seventy years old; her granddaughter, Mrs Julia Nystrom, who also lives somewhere in the United States, is forty four years old; her great granddaughter, Mrs. Adelina Persson, Eyebrow. Can., is twenty-five years old, and her great-great granddaughter. Mildred Evelyn, who is living with her mother at Eyebrow, is three years old. The picture showing these five generations in a row is a rare, not to say unique one. Five generations of the same family represented in the same picture is not rare, but when there are so many living links of an unbrok en chain there are nearly always both men and women in it.

London.--It is not because society on this side has gone mad over spirit-salism that Queen Alexandra bas aken it up with renewed fervor. For wers she has dabbled in it, and there is scarcely a good "medium" of the day who has not been consulted by her. Any of her personal friends who consumes a gift of second night is constantly summoned to "see things" her, and if she can tell her anything about King Edward or the late Duke of Clarence she may be sure of being in her special favor. It is said that one of the strongest links in the friendship between Miss Charlotte Knollys and her royal matress is that which arose out of the fact that this lady developed a gift of second sight ever so many years ago. She used to be in a position to tell her mistress certain things the then Princess of Wales was most anxious to know.

The very first night Queen Alexan dra arrived back in town from Saudringham she went off incognito to a seauce. For the moment the "medium" is carrying all before him or her as a society entertainer, and it is said when the London sesson opens there will be a room set aside at ances, a form of entertainment which now appeals to old and young, learned the early forties and fittles when she and simple.

NORWAY

Telegraph Director Heftye is the lion of the day. In the face of pow-erful and persistent opposition he succeeded in landing the great Marconi contract for establishing wireless con nections between southern Norway and New York. Then came a strike which threatened with strikes and lockouts involving 100,000 men. For weeks it looked as though the jubilee year was to be devoted to an industrial war that would shake the whole social structure of the country to its foundations. Again Heftye was called upon. Tens of thousands of men were paraded on paper by the contending parties. Heftye looked at the papers and smiled a sort of mysterious Mona Lisa smile. Next he turned around from the paper legions to the men themselves. The men spoke and spoke on both sides. Meanwhile Heftye said nothing. But he was a hard listener When the leader of both parties finally grew weary of words he suggestboth sides meet with him for a talk on his part. He made some very plain and clear suggestions: in fact, so clear that everybody could understand them at once, and what was still more important, so fair that no party dared to draw upon itself the odium of an excited nation by making serious objections. And in a few hours the flag of truce went up as do the Marconi masts near Stavanger.

United States Senator Knute Nelson says in an article on the modern Norwegian emigration to America: While the scholars and historians of Norway have given much attention and study to the ancient vikings, they have given but scant attention to the vikings of the nineteenth century, who have from time to time invaded and effected permanent settlements in the new world, and who have impressed themselves and their character more saga, in its entirety, full scope and bearing, remains to be written by some future historian of the Norwegian people. At Funesdalen, a Swedish frontier for the first 11 months of the year settlement near the Norwegian boundary, an interesting archaeological find has been made. As a farmer was digging a ditch near his house he struck four human bodies at a depth of 18 inches. Close by were some arrowheads and some coins from the time of King Olaf Kyrre, when this locality belonged to Norway. The find was reported to Stockholm, and the place was investigated by Prof. Hallstrom, who found 16 more bodies. In former times this locality was used only as summer pasture grounds. A strange feature of the find was that n wooden stake had been driven through one of the bodies into the ground below.

LETTER FROM THE

STATE GEOLOGIST TALKS OF VAST MINERAL RE-BOURCES.

RODUCTION IS NOW GREATER THAN EVER BEFORE.

Michigan Agricultural College Will Hold a Summer School to Begin June 24 and Close July 31.

Lansing, Mich.—"Probably no state in the Union produces in such great quantities such a diversity of minerals as Michigan," said State Geologist R. C. Allen in speaking of the var-ious mining industries being carried on within the state.

"Michigan has been known as a began the development of her great copper and iron mines. After nearly three-quarters of a century of continuous mining of iron and copper ores the production today is greater than it ever was before. So far as geologists are able to see Michigan will continue to supply vast quantities of iron and copper for generations to come. While Michigan's fame as a mining state rests mainly on her vast de-posits of copper and iron ores, she produces in addition a large number of other mineral products, among the more important of which are coal, salt, gypsum, clay, marl, limestone, glass, sand, whetstones and scythe stones, gem stones and silver. to 1896 a considerable amount of gold was produced from quarz veins in the vicinity of Ishpeming.

Gravel, Clay and Marl.

"Gravel, clay and mari are all found in the glacial drift which is the universal soil formation of the state. Gravels are becoming more and more valuable for use in road building and Marls are used in the road ballast. production of Portland cement, Marl beds occur in many of the inland lakes of the state, and constitute the basis of an important Portland cement industry. Michigan makes more cement from marl than any other state. Many of the most valuable clay deposits occur around the borders of the state in the beds of the extinct glacial Great Lakes, which were the predecessors of the present Great Lakes and whose shore lines are found far inland on the present day land surface. These clays form the basis of a brick and tile industry, the value of whose products exceed $2,000,000 annually.

"The Michigan coal basin occupies over 5,000 square miles of territory in the central part of the southern peninsula. Coal beds varying from an inch up to above four feet in thickness occur in the upper part of the coal measure series. It has been estimated that there are 8,000,000,000 tons of coal in the Michigan basin. most of which is available for mining At the present time the active cen ters of coal mining are Bay City. Sa ginaw. St. Charles and in Genesce The value of the coal produced is more than $3,000,000 an-

through a shaft at Detroit. greater part of the sait production of the state, however, is obtained by the pumping of brines and evaporation with waste fuel from lumber vacuum pans. Salt is produced mainly at Detroit and northward along ceeds that of any other state

"Gypsum occurs in the Grand Rapids group of the carboniferous series. The annual production is valued at $600,000 to $800,000.

"Michigan produces small quantities of oil and gas. Many of the farmers in the southeastern part of the state and some other places ob tain sufficient natural gas from shallow borings for domestic purposes.

Copper Industry Opened In 1845. "The copper industry in Michigan began as early as 1845. The copper mines are located on Kewcenaw point and southwestward in Ontonagon county. Michigan has the distinction today of being, all years considered, the largest contributor in metallic copper, of exhibiting the largest copper mining operations, of attaining the lowest cost per ton of handled, of exploiting with profit ores of lower grade than are mined else where and of paving larger total dividends than any other mining district in the world.

"Copper occurs in native form, mainly in conglomerates and trap The Calumet and Heela copper lode is three miles long and welve to fifteen feet thick and is mined at a depth of over one mile. From the mines the copper ore is hauled to the mills, most of which are located on the lake. In the mills the copper is separated from the into shapes for shipment. Iron Discovered 70 Years Ago. "Iron was discovered in the Lake Superior region in 1844 near Negau nee by Wm. A. Burt, who was in th employ of Dr. Douglans Houghton, the first state geologist of Michigan, Fo nearly half a century, prior to 1901. Michigan held first place in the production of iron ere. Since that time the production of Minnesota has been much greater than that of Michigan The main centers of iron mining are Ishpeming and Negaunce on the Mar quette range, Norway, Iron Mountain Crystal Falls and Iron River on the Meneminee range, and Bessemer and Ironwood on the Gogebic range.

"As old mines are abandoned new mines are started on new discoverles of ore and although Michigan has been mining iron ore for nearly seventy years there still remains in the ground ready for mining almost, if not quite, as much iron ore as has been produced in all preceding years. In other words more ore is developed and discovered each year on the average than is mined that year and at the present time the outlook is exceedingly encouraging for an indefin itely long and prosperous period of iron mining. Michigan produces normally from 10,000,000 to 13,000,000 tons of fron ore annually and it is expected that this production will materially increase in subsequent years.

The M. A. C. faculty and state board of agriculture has passed favorably upon the plan for a summer school at the college and the courses, which consist of an undergraduate and grad uate course, have been schemed out and also adopted by the faculty com mittee. Professor E. H. Ryder will have charge of the summer session and all communications of those in terested should be directed to him.

This is the first time in the history of the institution that so complete a summer school has been authorized. The summer session will begin Wednesday, June 24 and close Friday, July 31. Registrations must be made prior to June 23. The summer ses sion is open to all students regularly enrolled and to all persons of both sex who are not required to take any formal entrance examination. summer school is especially fitted for tenchers in need of the work, the session offers, and to students or others wishing to take special work or acquire credits for degrees.

These credits may apply toward degrees providing the student meets the entrance requirements.

The matriculation fee has been set with an incidental fee of $2.50 and an additional laboratory fee for those taking laboratory work. M. A C. is peculiarly fitted for technical training along every line and especial attention will be given in home economics with its kin sub-branches of domestic art, and domestic science. For the city wife, who has always worked in offices or who has had no opportunity to learn those things in house management which mean domestic prosperity, the summer sessions offer everything that a young wife needs from dressmaking and the Salina series and is produced baking to house sanitation, marketing, composition of menus, etc.

The under-graduate course will include bacteriology, botany, chemistry, dairying, entomology, farm crops, history and economics, home mills or in especially constructed omics, domestic science, horticulture mathematics, mechanical engineering pedagogics, physiology, physics, poultry husbandry, soils and zoology. degrees will embrace such studies as bacteriology, chemistry, entomology and veterinary science.

The summer sessions will be no experiment with the M. A. C., but are established as a permanent phase of its educational work during the summer vacation months. The present staff of the institution will give the instruction necessary for the courses. but the new scheme will deprive the members of their annual vacations.

Attorney General Fellows holds that the offices of county commissioner of schools and member of the state legslature are incompatable, while the offices of supervisor of a township and moderator of a school district are not incompatable. Calumet, Mich.-Following the failure of the Federation of Minera' attorneys to induce Judge O'Brien to quasti the conspiracy indictment against C. H. Moyer, Vice President Mahoney and 35 other officers and members of the Western Federation of Miners, pleas of abatement were entered Monday afternoon. These were supported by affidavits of John Antoli, an officer of the Calumet union, who charged that Governor Ferris. Attorney-General-Grant Fellows and Special Prosecuting Attorney George E. Nichols coerced, influenced and intimidated the grand jury and suggested to them the indictment.

It is charged that the governor per sonally wrote each member of the jury before that body was assembled and suggested the indictment

It is also claimed that the governor and attorney general intimidated the grand jury by attending the session while the governor was in Houghton in January.
It is also charged that Prosecuting

MURDER MYSTERY CLEARED UP. Carlysle Gunn Confesses to Being With Slayer of Policeman.

Detroit-The last shreds of the mys tery of the killing of Patrolman Madden on the night of December 9, at the Bethune police station, vanished Monday morning when Carlysle Gunn repeated in detail his confession of Sunday night that he was with Al Moore in the car at the time Madden was shot.

He made a clean breast of the whole affair, giving details of all that was done during the evening, but denying that he had anything to do with the actual killing or robbery which preceded it.

That Al Moore, who was killed while attempting a holdup, was the mur-derer of Madden had already been revealed by the confession of his brother Wesley.

MARKET QUOTATIONS LESS FOREIGN TRADE

Democratic Policy Aiready Has. Proyed Harmful.

Figures Show That New Tariff is Upsetting the Sound and Normal Development of the Commerce of the Country.

Advocates of low tariff rates have always argued that high duties obstructed foreign commerce in both directions. They have contended that in order to build up export business it was necessary to import merchan-disc liberally. "Make it easy for fordisc liberally, "Make it easy for for-eigners to sell their products in the United States and they will buy more in America," has been one of their stock pleas for a low tarix. It seems that the new tariff is not working that way. It is not lifting; exports of American merchandise above the figures for last year. In January imports fell about $8,600,000 below the record for the corresponding month a year ago, a fact to which the tariff-scalers might point as evidence that they had not let down the bars too far if it were not for the fact that in the same month the exports of merchandise from the United States fell about $23,230,000 below the figures for January, 1913.

In rather dull times the natural tendency of the foreign trade of the United States is toward a growing excess of exports over imports. More effort than usual is made to find markets abroad for American products luxuries cuts down purchases in other countries

When this natural change in foreign trade is reversed it is very good evidence that the tariff is upsetting the sound and normal development of the commerce of the country. nothing in the January statistics of the foreign trade of the United States to lead the American people to accept. the new tariff as satisfactory and

Interesting to Farmers. Since the new tariff placed corn on the free list more than 8,000,000 bushels have been imported. Over 1,000,-000 bushels came in two or three days last week. Much more will follow. The New York Journal of Commerce says that 15 vessels are bringing corn. to the United States from Argentina, or are loading cargoes of that grain; in Argentine ports for shipment to this country.

would puzzle city people to point out changes to a lower cost of living which have resulted from these large importations of corn. It will puzzle many Democratic congressmen much next fall, to show their farmer constituents how such wholesale use of South American corn in the United States is going to help agriculture in this country. Farming districts will be emphatically of the Missouri turn of mind when it comes to the extensive encroachment of foreign grain and other farm products upon the home markets hitherto enjoyed almost exclusively by American producers.

The first was his approval of the sundry civil bill with its rider exempting labor unions from the application of the Sherman antitrust law. True. In the early spring, when the first dandellon shows its green leaf, lay a few boards over a bed of the thickest of them, and see what a delicious salad bed of blanched leaves you can provide for your table for weeks. Dandelion is especially good for the blood, and so should be served often in the spring. The larger leaves, before the blossom comes, may be cut and cooked like spinach or with a little salt pork, then serve with vine-

Mint is another early arrival, and is most delightful for a sauce with spring lamb. Cut a bunch and bruise the leaves, pour on a little boiling hot vinegar and let it steep for a while, then add a teaspoon or more of powdered sugar, and serve with the lamb

Mint is also much relished as a mixture with other vegetables for salad. Take a bunch of mint and twice the quantity of lettuce, a few sprays of grass and a few onions sliced. Cut all the greens as fine as possible without crushing, and pour over a French dressing, using three tablespoonfuls of oil and one of vinegar a half teaspoon of salt and a few dashes of red pepper and a half teaspoon of powdered sugar. Mix well and pour over the salad.

Water cress is another most whole some spring saind, and when one is fortunate enough to get this snappy little salad green it may be served in any number of ways, with or without other greens in combination.

Wedding Gowns for Easter Brides

T IS for the Easter bride to choose whether she will be wedded in a 'regulation" gown or allow her fancy to run after the new modes and de part from accepted customs in her

There is something attractive in the thought of generations of brides clad in regulation trained princess ters of orange blossoms at each side, gowns of white satin, more or less and the vell falls to the edge of the elaborated with lace and embroidery, and more or less modified to resemble the passing fashions. Her gown is new phase, however beautiful, which fashion presents from year to year.

But no one will deny the bride the privilege of a gown modeled according to the last word in fashions. Two bridal gowns are pictured here which show the regulation gown as devel-oped for the present season, and a gown modeled distinctly on this sea

The bride with the veil wears a long-trained princess gown of white satin. It is made of satin, lace, and chiffon As a concession to the fash ion of today, the skirt part is alight ly draped falling in irregular folds over the hips and caught up in the front in a series of plaits near the waist line. The train is long and square. Such a gown requires a heavy satin to produce the right effect.

The tulle veil forms the crown of a cap, which is edged with a frill of very handsome old lace. The cap is made over a circle of wire which holds it in place. There are full clustrain, as it should. This bride carried a bridal bou-quet of white roses and lilies of the valley and wore a short strand of small pearls about her neck at the base of the high collar. There is no gainsaying the beauty and effectiveness of this costume. It is the apex of style and cannot go out of fashion

The bridal dress shown on the stand ing figure is distinctly in the mode, with little thought to what has gone before. It is a very gorgeous and omewhat oriental-looking costume of embroidered crepe de chine and lace.

The skirt is arranged in draped folds at each side, with an overskirt in the "minaret' style made of lace. There is a low underbodice of net and a very wide crushed girdle of the crepe de chine. Over all is a small lace coat with kimono sleeves and opening at the bust line. There is a hint of a Medici collar at the back.

The Bible—

What It Is

God, it is also the book from God. At least this is the way in which it gives its own ac gin: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God"—that is to say, is "God-breathed" (II Timothy 3:16). Again, in II Peter 1:20, 21, we read:

The Bible is not only the book of

"Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation for origin, for it seems clear that it s to the source rather than to the exposition of the Scripture that reference is here made.] For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man, but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." Here are some very clear and definite statements concerning the source of the Scripture. It is this "God-breathed" element that differentiates this book from all other writings. The Bible is quite often referred to nowadays as plendid "literature." Well, the Bible is that, but it is more than that—it is Scripture. Literature is the letter; Scripture is the letter inbreathed by the holy spirit. Just as in the creation of man we learn that man became a living soul when that frame came inbreathed by the spirit of life from God. Man is dust inbreathed by delty, and if you take away the spirit of life from man he returns to the letter, but it is the letter inbreathed by God's spirit that makes that letter Scripture. And when you rob the Bible of its inspiration you have nothing but mere literature left -you have no Scripture.

The Bible the Authority in Matters of Faith and Practice. Where is the seat of authority in matters of religion? This is always the problem of the day. Various replies are given to the question.

Reason, says one, is the seat of final authority. May not the intellect with its various functions be relied upon to render sure judgments? One has to recall the grotesque fancies that have from time to time taken hold of the finest and brainlest men and led them into the grossest de-lusions to satisfy himself that the seat of authority does not lie in the reason. Not that we are to throw reason away in matters of religion; for while faith is ofttimes above reason it is by no means contrary to it. The voice of reason, however, is not to be considered final and authoritative.

Can we not depend upon conscience, that organ as delicate and sensitive top, but fitted below the elbow, where they are slightly wrinkled, like a long-on the crepe de chine gown is covered and a frill of lace like that in the yoke falls over the hand almost to the more than almost to the more than almost to the sound and a still describe the right and wrong of matters religious? We have but to recall into the sound and sound the inefficiency of the right and wrong of matters religious? We have but to recall into the sound the ingood condition. sciences of some men have led them-Saul of Tarsus, for example—to recog where for our authority. "In all good conscience men have written deadly heresies in their books, and under the sanctions of a religious conscience

There are people who claim that the church is the ultimate authority in matters of faith and practice. This is the position of the Roman church Called of God, divinely founded, with perpetual witnesses to the truth, with bishops and councils—surely the church is a sufficient suide. Yet what enormities have flourished under the banner of the church! So long as she is composed of fallible human be-ings the church can never be final and authoritative in matters of faith and practice: On every hand we hear the cry "Back to Christ," he and he alone, is the final and ultimate authority in all these matters 'We certainly have no desire to take any glory away from the church's Lord and Master from the controls lord and maked in order to give it to so sacred a book even as the Bible. We are willing to go "back to Christ." But where shall we find him? With the exception of a reference in Josephus and a line or two in Tacitus where, out side of the Bible, shall we find Christ So we see that in order to "get back fall back upon the Scriptures

For our master himself the Scriptures were considered sufficient au thority in matters of faith and pracup all the passages in which these words of the masses. words of the master occur, "Is it not written?" "Have ye not read?" "What saith the Scriptures?" "It is written." A careful study of such Scripture references will reveal the fact that Christ referred to the Scriptures as the anthority which settle matters of faith and practice for him. Should the Bible he less to the church than it was to the church's master? We think not

HAS DONE GOOD WORK

RECORD OF THE "SAFETY FIRST" MOVEMENT.

Not Alone on Railroad Lines, but Wherever Hazardous Work is Performed, Employee Have Been Quick to See its Value.

When the "safety first" movement, adopted a little more than two years ago by one of our great railroad corporations, has reduced by nearly 22 cent, the number of fatalities on its line, is it any wonder that nearly all the railroads in the United States and Canada have kept it up and made it a watchword among their employes? Not only on railroads but in factories and iron mills, and, in fact, wherever there is hazardous work to be performed, no matter what the nature of It may be, the movement is spread-

The business of transportation requires that more than ordinary precaution should be taken to safeguard operation from accidents, and while employes in many respects are identi-cal, and in safeguarding the latter the safety of the public is also largely secured. It is really not a question of safeguard, but more of intelligent caution constantly exercised.

The aim of the "safety first" movement is to teach each employe a sense of personal responsibility not altogether for his own safety but also for the safety of his fellow employes. It teaches every man in the service so to safeguard the operation of the railroad that he works for that accidents of every kind shall be as few as human foresight can make them.

Workmen themselves are in a large part to blame for the many accidents when they do not exercise the care and caution required to prevent acci-dents. They should be taught to avoid carelessness at all hazards

Too many men in railroad service care nothing for the public's interest or their employer's; all they seem to think of is the least work, no matter how it is done. It is this class of who are responsible for the awful statistics which show that one railroad employe out of every thirteen and one trainman out of every eight are killed in the United States every

The problem of personal injury is complicated by the multiplication of safety devices, for this average holds good even when perfect equipment is in use. Safety devices undoubtedly nelp, but it must always be remembered that the most important part of the train service is the man behind the steam power. It is the human element that counts most in railroad

It is the object of the "safety first" movement to reduce the number of personal injuries among railroad men by encouraging the spirit of co-operation between the men and officials of the railroad companies. When rules are drafted by railroad officials for the safety of its employes, it is in the long run to the advantage of the employe to obey them, although it may seem at the time irksome.

State Railway Troubles.

Complaints have been made for some time past of the unsatisfactory financial management of the Belgian state railroads, and now the traffic management also appears to have broken down. From all parts of the country there are accounts of delayed passenger trains and of the detention of consignments of freight for three or four days, or even a week because rious causes are assigned for the breakdown—discontent among the en-gine drivers, malingering in view of the fact that they receive full pay dur-

What It Would Cost the Country's Railroads to Replace Wooden Cars With Steel Ones.

That it will cost the railroads $516-619,100 to comply with the pro ederal law requiring them to replace their present wooden passenger equip-ment with steel cars is the statement contained in a bulletin issued by a special committee on relations of railway operation to legislation which represents all of the leading rail lines n the country.

The annual interest charge on this amount at 5 per cent. would total $30,-730,955. According to the committee, the construction of wooden passenger equipment practically has ceased, and rapid strides are being made toward fully equipping railways with either steel or steel underframe cars.

Reports received by the committee from 247 companies operating 227,754 miles of track, disclose that between January 1 and July 1 of the present year orders were placed for 1,140 passenger equipment vehicles, including in all railroad operation the safety of passengers is the first consideration, the problems presented in protecting cations for 1.064 or 2022 The problems p postal, mail, baggage, passenger, excations for 1,064, or 93.2 per cent., of these cars provide for all steel construction, while the remaining cars have steel underframe

A table prepared by the committee shows that of 1,880 passenger equip-ment vehicles acquired in 1909 by the rail lines, 26 per cent, were built of steel, 22.6 per cent, had steel under-frames and 51.4 per cent, were constructed of wood In 1912 the railroads purchased 2,660 cars for passenger service, and of the total 68.7 per cent. were of steel and only 10.4 per cent. of wood-A comparison of the number of steel passenger equipment cars in use January 1, 1910, and January 1, 1913, shows that there was an increase during that period of 1.055 per cent.

BIG FACTOR IN RAILROADING

Effective Work That Hes Been Done by the Master Car Builders' Association

That every railroad does not live unto itself alone is due in a large measure to the work of the Master Car Builders' association. One could hardly imagine the chaotic condition in which we would find railroading had there been no association to do has been done by the master car build-

We all recognize the value of the work of this association. Even the United States government through its proper department and officials, has shown that it appreciates the farreaching effect of what has been accomplished.

The letters "M. C. B.," if they stand for anything, stand for just that which is opposed to chaos, and are synony-mous with system, economy and operation.

Without the M. C. B. rules of interchange, freight traffic would become a tangle impossible of unraveling; without M. C. B. standards, the expense of car maintenance would be doubled: without M. C. B. recommended practice, not only would we be making no progress, but as railroads we would be going backward.

To Make Travel Safer.

A new device for greater safety of allroad travel has been tested by an eastern line and the test is declared to have been entirely successful. It is an airbrake system that can be operated with either pneumatic or electric control, and it can stop a train of 12 steel passenger cars and locomotive, all weighing nearly 1,000 tons, running with a speed of 60 miles an hour, within 1,000 feet, or the length of the train. Emergency application of high speed brakes now in general use would bring the same train to a stop in 1,600 to 1,800 feet. It is claimed for the new device that it can stop the same train going at 30 miles an hour in 200 feet.

"Yieldable Extension" Care. A western car manufacturer is building "yieldable extension" railroad cars, which, it is asserted, will greatly lessen the danger to life and limb in railroad accidents. The cars are especially constructed, with a framework which is designed to yield and to a certain extent telescope under a severe shock, instead of going to pieces while remaining rigid under ordinary bumps, such as would be received in every-day use by the coupling of cars or the sudden application of the emergency brakes.

the Chevalier Beaupre. It was all as it should be; he was entirely happy. He had asked three wishes of the good fairles, as he had said long ago; that the prince should be emperor—that he might become " marshal of France under another Bons parte"that Alixe should love him The first two he believed about to be the time to think of that. Alixe had kissed him good-by. That would more than do till the fight was over. So he sped back to London, missing Pietro, but hopeful and buoyant. And in Lon-don there was a letter for him from Virginia.

"Dear Francois," Lucy began. think that the first letter sent to you by Harry's wife should be to tell you that she has betrayed your trust in I am distressed beyond words, for I have made a mistake which may nean distress to you. And then Harry and went away on a visit to Martin's Brandon for three days, and it was only when I came back that I discovered the dreadful mistake I had made. Can you ever forgive me? Harry and I thought over every possibility of stopping it, but there seemed to be no chance. Are you very angry with me, lear friend of Harry's and of mine?"

The letter went on with reproaches and regrets and finally slipped into a tale of a new happy life which Francols had made possible for the two. He read it over several times. His letter to Alixe, which should have been ent only after his death, had gone to What then? She would know that he loved her: that he had loved her always; that he would love her forever: that the one wish of his life had been that she should love himself—not Pietro. He had said that in the letter: that was all. He was glad that she should know, though he would never have told her in life. It was ione and he would find out now if Pletro indeed cared for her, if she cared for Pletro. And if not, then one had waited long enough; then at last -the joy of the thought choked him.

CHAPTER XXX.

The Third Wish.

On the day when Francois in Lonion read that letter of Lucy Hamp which had awaited his return from France, a letter from Lucy Hampton reached Alixe at the chateau of Vicques. She carried it to Pietro's room where he sat in a deep chair at a which looked over Delesmontes valley and the racing Cheulte liver, and the village strung on the shores. His elbow on the stone window-sill, his chin in his hand, he stared at the familiar picture.

Alixe, looking down at the black head with its short curls set in thick locks-after the manner of the curls of Praxiteles' Hermes-was startled to see many bright lines of gray through the dark mass. Was ev the broad band of white in his hairand now Pictro-big little Pictro, who had come to them and learned to ride Coq and played with them. Was Pietro getting old and gray?

By one of the sudden impulses characteristic of her, her hand flew out and rested on the curled head as if to protect it, motherly, from the whitening of time.

And Pletro turned slowly and looked There are old people living in For up at her with eyes full of hopeless land today who remember hearing ness and adoration. 'Surely," said Pietro, and waited with his unsmilling eyes on her face. "My dear mademolectle." Alixe read.

"I am writing to beg your forgiveness, as I have begged that of the Chevaller Beaupre, for the very great fault I "I thought you cared for Francois," have committed. The chevaller trust Pietro said simply, And added, "Didn't ed to me a letter for you which was to you?"

"Not I," said Pietro.
"The letter of Francols has not come: that is certain: I wonder if the negro Sambo lost it."

"Probably," Pietro said. "It should have come before this one, otherwise.' "It is a riddle," Alixe decided, "and I never guess them." Then, dropping into a seat on the wide window "Pletro-you are letting yourself be depressed."

The gray eyes met hers with some thing that seemed a wall of reserve in their steady glance. "I think possibly I miss having no exercise," he said "I will feel more natural when I can get about.

Alixe looked at him. "You are eat ing your heart out to be with Fran cois," she said, and laid her hand on

Pletro stared as if the light touch fingers twisted lightly around the small ones, and he turned his face again, holding her hand so, to the window and the view of the valley and they sat so, the girl's hand loose in the hollow of the man's; a slow record into Alixe's face; there was con fusion in her brain. She had laid her hand on that of her brother; her broth

This delicate big grasp that held her was not brotherly: through all her veins suddenly she knew that; the flush sho up to her eyes, to her forehead, and she tried, with an attempt at an every day manner, to draw her hand away But Pietro, his set pale face toward the window, his eyes gazing out, held her hand. With that the world had recled and was whirling past her. Pictro had caught both her hands in a ight grip and had drawn them against was holding them there, was looking at her with a face which not even she, this time, might mistake, Alixe, with her head bent so that Pietro did not see her face, with her head bending lower-lower, suddenly was on her knees by the chair and her was on Pietro's arm.

"Alixe." he whispered, "what is itwhat have I done?" But the brown waves of hair with he blue ribbon tied around them lay otionless on his arm. And suddenly thought shook him.

"It cannot be!" he gasped.

And Alixe lifted her face, and the exaggerated black lashes lifted, and the blue glance lifted and rested on Pietro's black hair bent down where the light shone on the silver lines through it. Un finghed her hand impulsively, gently—as Alixe did things, and touched the thick lock with an infinitely delicate caress. "Your hair-is all turning gray," she whispered in two quick breaths, and at that, in some occult fashion Pietro knew. For moments they had no need of that makeshift, language; the great house was very quiet, and one heard the horses stamping in the paved courtyard and the grooms singing, and yet one did not hear it. Distant sounds came from the village, but one only knew that long after, in remembering that morning. All they knew was that the ghost of a lifelong affection of brother and sister stood before them. changed by a miracle to a shining angel into whose face, for these first moments, they dared not look. Then slowly, exquisitely, courage came and hand close in hand, they looked at each other astonished, glad. It was Pietro and Alixe still, the ancient playfellows, the childhood friends-all the dear familiarity was there yet, but no longer were they brother and elster And then, after a while they began to compare notes of things hidden.

When did you begin-to like methis way, Pietro?" I don't know," answered Pletro stupidly. "Does it make any differ

"Last year-what?" Pletro saked; he had already forgotten the question "Oh—that I began to—mon dieu—no. Last year! Why, I, think it was the day I came and saw you riding Coq." "Oh, Pietro-if you will talk only nonsense!" Alixe's voice was disap-pointed. "But why, then, didn't you ever say so before this? We are both a thousand years old now. If you-loved mo"—she spoke the word in a lower voice-"why, then, were you as quiet as a mouse about it all these years ?'

Alixe considered. "I don'tever did, Pietro, Not really. thought I did perhaps. He dazzled me -Francois-with his way of doing all sorts of things brilliantly, and that wonderful something about him makes everybody love him. He believed in his star; there was around him the romance of the emperor's prophecy and the romance of the career which is, we believe, about to begin now; there was always a glamour about Francois." "Yes," Pietro agreed. "The glamous

CHAPTER XXXI.

The Night Before.

Out in the dark, in the harbor of Boulogne, the ship Edinburgh Castle lay rocking in the wind. Prince Louis Bonaparte, who had chartered her, and the handful of his followers who had sailed with him on her from England had disembarked quictly at twilight, and in small companies had succeeded in entering the town and the quarters of the officers who were, in France, the nucleus and the hope of their at tempt. In the rooms of Lieutenant Aladenize, the host of the Prince, a short council had been held to go over once more the plans which had been discussed and settled by letter for weeks already. The work was carefully arranged: there was almost nothing to be changed, and the little com a fate, scattered, with grave faces, with quiet good nights to the Prince who might tomorrow he their Em peror, to the Prince for they might tomorrow night be any or all ruined men or dead men. He sat erect and listened. Thelin was brushing clothes with energy in the bedroom, and through another door there came a light sound of a paper turned, of a gay song sung softly. And turned, of a gay song sung softly. And a chill to his delicately poised sensitiveness. "What is it, Louis?" he cried arrival from Virginia six weeks before, said Diogenes. to have him near himself had been a pleasure to Louis Bonaparte; he seemed to bring back the freshness of his early days, of the young confidence when his star shone for him, distant perhaps, but undimmed by the black clouds which drove now across it. He was a bit superstitious about Francois as well, with an idea, which he spoke to no one, that a pivotal in terest of his career rested in the modst figure.

He rose, this night in Boulogne, as the paper rustled and the little French provincial chanson sounded from the room where Francola Beaupre his secretary, had been installed, and stepped to the closed door.

"De tous cote's l'on que je suis

Francois sang softly. The Prince smiled, As he opened the door the singing stopped; the young man sprang respectfully to his feet, a let-ter grasped in his hand, and stood waiting.

"Sire!" he said. Prince Louis flung out his hand with a gesture of impulsiveness strange to his controlled manner, yet not out of drawing to those who know him wall. "Ah, Francois," he cried. "Let the titles go for tonight. Say, 'Louis,' as on that day when we first saw each other; when the four children played together in the old chateau rulus. And Francois smiled his radiant exquisite smile and answered quietly. "But yes, my brother—Louis." And went on, "I believe I shall not sleep tonight, Louis. I believe I am too happy to sleep.

As one reads a novel for relaxation in the strain of a critical business affair, Prince Louis caught at the dis-traction of this side issue. The next morning was planned to the last detail; there was nothing to do till day light, yet he could not sleep at pres ent. Here was a romance of some sort. He sank back on the cushions of the coach of Lieutenant Aladenize's smoking room and put his feet up lux uriously, and slowly lighted a cigar of Havana

"Tell me," he ordered, and the gen tleness of appeal was in the order. "Sire"—the young man began—and corrected himself, "Louis," he said. The Prince smiled dimly, "Since our landing I have known that a wonderful thing has hannened to me. It is"-

And he told, in a few words, of that day when his self-restraint had given way and how, when his guard was down and he was on the point of telling his lifelong secret love, some spirit of perversity-but Francois did not know it was an angel-had caught Alixe, and she had accused him of wishing always that she might love Pietro. And how, meshed in that same net of hurt recklessness, he had answered in her own manner-"Yes," he had said, "it was that which had been the wish of his life—that Alixe might love Pietro!" And Francols laughed gaily, telling the simple entanglement to the Prince, the night before the battle. "One sees how she is quick and clear-sighted, my Alixe," he said. "For she knew well even then it was not that I wished." He stopped, for in the quiet contained look of the listener an intangible something struck

"I was just thinking of my sense of confusion of identity sometimes when I read articles about myself," the president said. "I have never read an article about myself in which I recognized myself, and I have come to have the impression that I must be some kind of a fraud, because I think a great many of these articles are written in absolute good faith.

"I tremble to think of the variety in the impressions make—and it is being borne in on me so that it may change my very dispo-sition—that I am a cold and removed person who has a thinking machine inside which he adjusts to the circumstances-which he does not allow to be moved by any winds of affec tion or emotion of any kind-but turns like a cold searchlight on anything that is presented to his attention and makes !t work.

Feels Responsibility Keenly. "I am not aware of having any de tachable apparatus inside of me. On the contrary, if I were to interpret my self. I would say that my constant embarrassment is to retain the emo tions that are inside of me.

"You may not believe it, but I some times feel like a fire from a far from extinct volcano, and if the lava not seem to spill over it is because you are not high enough to see into the basin and see the caldron boil. Be cause, truly, gentlemen, in the position which I occupy there is a sort of -I do not know how else to express than to say—passionate sense of being connected with my fellow men in a peculiar relationship of respons bility of office, but God knows there are enough things in this world that need to be corrected.

Fear He'll Disappoint People. "I have mixed first and last with all sorts and conditions of men-there are mighty few kinds of men that ulated on her Titantic memorial, said have to be described to me, and there are mighty few kinds of experiences that have to be described to me—and when I think of the number of men who are looking to me as the repre sentative of a party, with the hope for all varieties of salvation from the things they are struggling in the midst of, it makes me tremble.

"It makes me tremble not only with a sense of my own inadequacy and weakness, but as if I were shaken by the very things that are shaking Peeling Onlons for a Living.
The profession of onlon peeling is not one that obtains much notice, yet them, and if I seem circumspect it is because I am so diligently trying not to make any colossal blunders not one that obtains much notice, yet there are at least five hundred women of blunders a fellow can make in 24 hours if he is not careful and if With practice, they can make four or five shillings per day. Very often they have been peeling since childhood, lag that I have.

Always Eager to Get Advice. "I was amused the other day at a remark that Senator Newlands made had read him the trust message that I was to deliver to congress some ten days before I delivered it, and I nover stop doctoring things of that kind until the day I have to deliver them. When he heard it read to congress he said: 'I think it was better than it was when you read it to me.' I said: Lord were to follow all the advice that 'Senator, there is one thing which I do not think you understand. I not only use all the brains I have but all I can porrow, and I have borrowed a lot

I am listening; I am diligently trying to collect all the brains that are borrowable in order that I may not make more blunders than it is inevitable that a man should make who has great limitations of knowledge and capacity. London. -- Excepting the lesser shrew, the smallest British mammal is the harvest mouse. The length of its tail about a quarter of an inch longer. The color of the back and flanks is yellowish brown, and undermeath it is almost pure white. The earliest English description of this mouse is con-tained in a letter of Gilbert White, written in 1767 to Thomas Pennant, in which he says: "From the color, shape, size and manner of nosting. I make no doubt but that the species is nondescript. . . . They never enter houses: carried into ricks and barns with the sheaves; abound in harvest; and build their nests amid the straws of the corn above the ground, and some times in thistles. They breed as many as eight at a litter, in a little round nest, composed of the blades of grass or wheat." In a later letter Gilbert White says: "Two of them, in a scale, weighed down just one copper halfpenny, which is about the third of an ounce advoirdupois; so that I suppose they are the smallest quadrupeds in this island." Formerly the nests of barvest mice were commonly found in standing corn, but the close cutting reaping machines played havoc with them and they are seldom found in crops nowadays. The summer nest is about the size of an orange, made of grass, corn blades or split leaves of reeds cunningly woven together. The most usual situation of their nests is in the tangled herbage along the sides of fields and in ditches, among the neads of thistles and sometimes reeds. The winter nest is a more solid structure, it is made of mosses and is completely closed. Sometimes they enter hay ricks in the winter and keep warm in large companies gether. The harvest mouse is fairly abundant in the southern counties of England, and is very rare in Scotland; in Wales and Ireland it is unknown tender shoots of young leaves and also insects. No doubt many harvest mice fall victims to hawks and weasels.

FRENCH DOG THEIR NEMESIS

Two Alleged Bank Robbers Run Down by Clue of Small Poodle.

Connellsville, Pa .- "Jerry," a French poodle led to the arrest of two alleged bank robbers here. James Reynolds. Jr., aged twenty-one, and Mar tin Mullin, aged twenty, were arrested here on complaint of Julius Beller of Johnstown, who told the police that his bank had been entered and $1,000 thing that comes down here has to stolen. The Johnstown police learned that Reynolds had telephoned to friends in Johnstown and the police there notified the local authorities to arrest him, saying that probably he would have a French poodle dog with him. The two men were arrested, and when taken to the lockup Reynolds had in his pocket $206.05, it is said, and Mullin had $160. The young men admitted robbing the bank, it but each blamed the other with taking the money.

Little Animal Bores Its Way Into Conduit, Short Circuiting All Signal Wires.

Tarrytown, N. Y .- The New York Central railroad was tied up by a his way into a conduit at the Main street crossing, short circuiting al signal wires. The Wildey street sema phore board flopped up and down, alternating between "danger" and "clear." Then it was noticed that all the signals were doing a dance. The gateman at the crossing looked into the conduit and saw the ground hog. Laborers were summoned and fire was started to smoke out the animal.

The tower man at the south of the station, seeing smoke, thought the crossing was on fire and stopped all north-bound trains, including fast western expresses. After a while the groundhog capitulated and traffic was red painted prairie schooner, with windows and a protruding stovepipe. with the words, "Bound for Canada," on the schooner's side, was the object of considerable interest as it passed on the way northward from Nebraska a short time ago through the towns in Nebraska, South and North Dakota. After some weeks of strenuous traveling in this way, Mr. J. F. Jensen made the overland trip from Jameson, Nebrasks, and with his little family made the regular customs entry at North Portal, in the province of Saskatche-wan. Their destination was Willow Bunch, a district that. Mr. Jensen had selected as one in which it possible for him to work out his fortune. He located on a good half section of land, and intended putting on it some cattle that would fatten on the wild prairie grass that grows so luxuriously in that district. In addition to this his purpose was to cultivate a portion of it and raise wheat, oats, barley or flax. In short, a life devoted to mixed farming was what he had in view and it is easy to un derstand that he will make a success of it, and in a year or so will attach some more land holdings. Although his beginning may be small, it may safely be said that Mr. Jensen, like thousands of others who have begun life in western Canada on no more and with probably much less, will prosper. He will not be far from a line of railway. Schools will be close at hand and other social conditions so necessary in a new country are available.—Advertisement.

CHAPTER VI.

A Tip From Headquarters. GGIE gave herself over to more cigarettes in an easy chair sprawled out in an attitude of comfort never taught in any finishing school for young ladies. Soon the coming of loe Garson, who was usually in and out of the apartment a number of times daily, provided a welcome diversion. Aggle explained in response to his question that Mary had gone out to keep an engagement with Dick Gibler.

"Mary has been with him a good deal lately," he said, balf question-"That's what," was the curt agree-

"Think she's stuck on him?" "Why hot?" Aggie retorted. "Bet your life I'd be if I had a chauce.

and his eyes wandered to the window. Again Aggle studied him with a swift glance of interrogation. "Joe, if there's anything on your mind shoot it.' "It's Mary." Garson explained, with some embarrassment; "her and young

"Well?" came the crisp question. "Well, somehow," Garson went on still somewhat confusedly, "I can't see any good of it for her."

Why?" Aggle demanded, in sur-

Mary he'd be likely to send the police us-strong! Believe me, I ain't looking for any trip up the river." "We ain't done nothin' they can touch us for. Mary says so."

Whether we've done unything or whether we haven't don't matter," he objected. "Once the police set out after you they'll get you. Russin ain't in it with some of the things I have seen pulled off in this town."

"Oh, can that 'fraid talk!" Aggle exclaimed roughly. "I tell you they can't get us. We've got our fingers crossed." A noise at the hall door interrupted her, and she looked up to see a man, while behind him appeared the maid, protesting angrily.

"Never mind that appounding thing with me." the newcomer rasped to the expostulating servant in a voice that suited well his thick set figure, with the bullet shaped head and the bulllike neck. He was Cassidy, who had had Mary Turner in his charge on the occasion of her ill fated visit to Edward Gilder's office four years before.

Cassidy regarded Garson grin. Sure, they was tipped off. We got to protect the city.'

"Got anything in that record of four'n." Garson went on venomously, "about her getting another job and your following her up again and having her thrown out? Got it there about the letter you had old Gilder write, so that his influence would get her canned?"

"Oh, we had her right the first time." "You did not. She was railrouged for a job she never done. She went in honest, and she came out honest."

"And that's why she's here now with a gang of crooks," Cassidy reforted. a gang of crooks," Cassay reforced,

Now, the girl was demure in seeming almost beyond belief—a childish creature, very fair and dainty, guileless surely, with those untroubled eyes of blue, those softly curving lips of warmest red and the more delicate bloom and the rounded cheeks. There were the charms of innocence and sim plicity in her manner as she stopped just within the doorway, whence she regarded Mary with a timid, pleading gaze, her slender little form poised lightly as if for flight. "Did you want me. dear?" she asked ately, "this is Mr. frwin, with come to see you in behalf of General Hastings."
